Dear Denny,

Earlier this spring, you asked us to keep your name on our wait list in case we were able to make any more offers of admission for the 2023 fall semester. We now have a clear picture of the number of students who will be enrolling in the fall and, unfortunately, we will not have a place in the class to offer you.

We appreciate your interest in Cornell and your patience while you were on the wait list. You are a student who has much to contribute to a college community. We are confident that you have other fine opportunities for undergraduate education and know you will thrive wherever you enroll.

If, after a successful year or two elsewhere, you continue to believe that Cornell may be the right school for you, we hope you will consider applying to transfer here. Cornell enrolls between 600-700 transfer students each year, and you will find information for transfer applicants on our website: admissions.cornell.edu.

In the meantime, my very best wishes for every success as you continue your education.

Sincerely,

Shawn L. Felton
Executive Director of Undergraduate Admissions
