Denny Cao

Dear Denny,

Thank you for your application to Case Western Reserve University. The university received a record number of undergraduate applications this year, many from academically promising students like yourself. Because Case Western Reserve is a residential university that guarantees housing for all first-year students, we have been forced to be conservative in the number of acceptances we initially offer. The admission committee hopes you will accept a place on our wait list for the Class of 2027.

We are optimistic that we will be able to grant a number of acceptances to students from the wait list. Over the last three years, an average of 300 students per year were offered admission from the wait list at Case Western Reserve. Housing is guaranteed for all students who are admitted from the wait list. Need-based financial aid and scholarships will also be available for students who qualify.

All communication from Case Western Reserve regarding your wait-list status will be delivered via email, so it is important that you respond to messages from the university if you wish to remain in consideration. On April 9, we will send you an email asking if you would like to remain on the wait list. Students who respond in the affirmative will be considered if additional acceptances are granted, and students who respond in the negative or do not respond will be removed from consideration.

If you have additional questions about the status of your application, I encourage you to be in touch with me at 216.368.4450 or admission@case.edu.

Sincerely,

Robert R. McCullough
Dean of Undergraduate Admission
